

Abuse, Neglect, & Poverty

For professionals in psychology, behavioral health, and social work

Child abuse and neglect is a daunting topic. This training will highlight when and how to report child abuse and neglect. Additionally, the relationship between poverty and abuse or neglect will be discussed. The training will review the effects and myths of poverty. Participants will also gain insight into what to look for and how to take a people-first approach when working with children and families living in poverty.

OBJECTIVES

1. Identify who the number one reporters of child abuse and neglect are and describe how to report child abuse and neglect.
2. Discuss what questions to ask a child who may be experiencing abuse or neglect and what questions to ask a child who discloses to you.
3. Identify the types of poverty, myths surrounding poverty, and effects of poverty and discuss how those relate to child abuse and neglect.
